four hundred students are enrolled; courses are offered for both regular Army officers and for training complement officers. The commandant of the school is an unidentified lieutenant colonel. Instructors are Bulgarian officers, but Soviet officers make frequent inspections.

LAW AND THE LEGAL PROFESSION

- 8. In Bulgaria, lawyers are State employees. Defendants are assigned a lawyer and pay a fee fixed by law. If a defendant wishes an attorney other than the one he is assigned, he must pay a fee 20 percent above the regular amount.
- 9. Lawyers are required to belong to the legal council, to which they must pay the following sums, based on the amount of fees they earn:
  - a. Up to 100 leva, 20 percent;
  - b. From 100 to 200 leva, 30 percent; and
  - c. From 300 to 1,000 leva, 60 percent.
- 10. Each legal council of attorneys in the various cities has subordinate groups of lawyers "collectives"; each "collective" consists of about 15 to 20 lawyers.
- 25X1 11. magistrates and attorneys are notably influenced by the Communist Party during the course of political trials. Attorneys do not like to defend political prisoners because they cannot freely defend them and also because they face the moral coercion of society. Often the lawyers who defend political cases are later charged with political crimes. During the trials, lawyers assigned to the defense have the fear of losing their balance in the support of their clients.

Legal Studies

- 12. After completing the four year jurisprudence course at the university, law students are assigned as apprentices for six months to an attorney designated by the legal council. At the end of this period of practice, the students must pass the following examinations:
  - a. Written:
    - (1) Civil law.
    - (2) Criminal law.
    - (3) Political science: Marxism and Leninism (examinations introduced in the 1949-1950 school year).
  - b. Oral:
    - (1) Penal law.
    - (2) Penal practice.
    - (3) Civil law.
